Introduction

The Haikyuu Character Search System, driven by the dynamic Elasticsearch and the efficient quicksort algorithm, has been meticulously crafted to cater to the needs of Haikyuu enthusiasts, ardent volleyball fans, and inquisitive minds across the globe. Its primary purpose is to provide a user-friendly and efficient means of accessing information about Haikyuu characters, allowing users to recall essential details about these characters even when their names escape memory. This comprehensive report embarks on an exploration of the technical intricacies and rich features embedded within the Haikyuu Character Search System. By unraveling how it functions and offering guidance on its usage, we aim to empower users to unlock the world of Haikyuu characters effortlessly and enhance their overall experience within the Haikyuu fandom.

The problem that we are trying to solve

Haikyuu is one of the most famous Japanese manga series, which was subsequently adapted into a globally beloved anime television show. Its content concerns competitive volleyball at regional, national, and international levels. Haikyuu boasts a diverse cast of characters, ranging from fan favorites like Hinata to the lesser-known but still impactful supporting characters. However, due to the various characters in the series, some people may have trouble remembering their names, but they still want to learn more about them. Therefore, we have created a search engine that provides information on Haikyuu characters, including their names, aliases (AKA), gender, date of birth, age, height, weight, occupation, team, number, position, personality, and background. Our primary goal is to enable users to identify characters based on other information, even if they cannot recall the characters' names.

Existing relevant systems

Our main data source is haikyuu-fancam.com, a repository of comprehensive information about all Haikyuu characters, including their appearances in specific scenes. However, our search system in development will concentrate solely on essential character details like basic information. This simplified approach aligns perfectly with our goal, which is to assist newcomers and casual Haikyuu fans in effortlessly recalling and retaining fundamental character information, thus enhancing their accessibility to and enjoyment of the anime.

Implementation

- Data collection, example documents, and data statistics

Our search system compiles data from haikyuu.fandom.com and organizes it into a JSON file containing detailed information about 100 characters, including their name, aliases (AKA), gender, date of birth, age, height, weight, occupation, team, number, position, personality, picture, and a brief background. The data has been gathered from Haikyuu.fandom.com, and we have included both the main Haikyuu characters and others based on their roles in the anime and manga series.

Example of JSON file:

- Tools and software

Tool and Software	Roles
1. Visual Studio Code	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Use Visual Studio Code to create a JSON file that contains 100-character information for Haikyuu characters. - Utilize Visual Studio Code to edit Python and HTML files for creating and displaying websites.
2. Elastic search	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Set up Elasticsearch, a powerful search and analytics engine. - Create an Elasticsearch index to store the data from the JSON file. - Use Elasticsearch's APIs to upload the JSON file and populate the index.

3. Kibana	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Set up Kibana, which provides a user-friendly interface for visualizing and managing Elasticsearch data. - Connect Kibana to your Elasticsearch index to visualize the data. - Create visualizations and dashboards to explore your Haikyuu character information.
4. Python (Flask)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Create a Flask web application, which will serve as the front end for your search engine. - Implement search functionality in Flask using Elasticsearch queries to interact with your Elasticsearch index. - Design and modify your website to provide an intuitive user interface for searching and viewing Haikyuu character information.

- System diagram

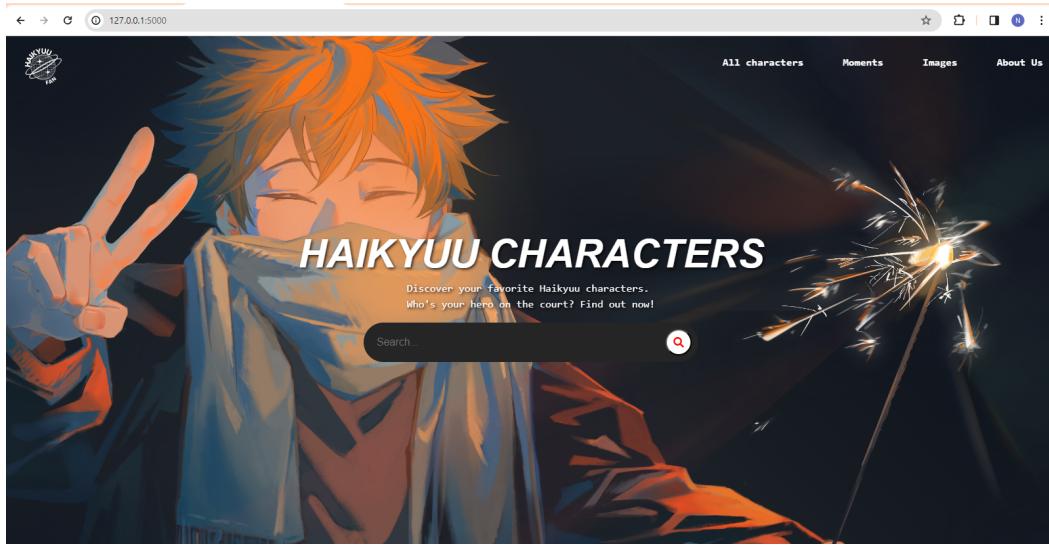

When initiating the search engine, Flask, a web framework, is utilized to create a web application. This application comprises two main pages, `index.html` and `search.html`, managed by a Python script called `search_app.py`. Once Flask is up and running, users are directed to the `index.html` page, which serves as the homepage of our search system. The `index.html` page prominently features a search box, inviting users to input queries such as a character's name, aliases (AKA), gender, and more. When a user submits a query, the system processes it by navigating to the `/search` route within the `search_app.py` file. At this point, Flask interacts with the Elasticsearch search API, a powerful tool for searching and retrieving data. The Elasticsearch search API then returns a list of documents that match the user's query. These documents contain detailed information about characters, presented in a ranked list on the search.html page. This page serves as the platform for users to explore and find specific details about characters based on their search criteria. To enhance user experience, a "back" button is provided on the results page. Ranking - “ Hinata coach”

In our ranking system, we not only consider the score derived from the most queried information, but we also factor in a field-based ranking. This involves prioritizing the name initially and then proceeding to evaluate other criteria. The rationale behind this approach is that solely relying on the score from the most queried information may result in the user's desired name being ranked lower. This discrepancy arises from an overemphasis on certain elements, such as background information. By first ranking based on the name, we aim to ensure that the most relevant and desired information is given priority before considering other factors in our evaluation process.

For users:

1. The user inputs the query "Hinata coach" into a search block.

2. The system responds by directing the user to the result page.

Discussion

- Limitation of our search system

Our search system is specifically designed to search and display information only about characters from the anime or manga series Haikyuu. Our database exclusively contains data related to these characters. Consequently, if a user attempts to search for characters that are not part of the Haikyuu series, the system will not yield any results as it lacks information about characters beyond Haikyuu. In simpler terms, the search system is constrained to the boundaries of the Haikyuu. Any queries for characters from other series or unrelated content will not produce any outcomes, given the system's limited dataset.

- Technical difficulties, challenges, and lessons learned

Our development process encountered several technical difficulties and challenges, accompanied by valuable lessons learned.

The initial challenge revolved around Kibana, where we faced difficulty in accessing it after the second use. This resulted in repetitive installations, leading to time wastage. To address this issue, we are actively working on finding a more sustainable solution to enhance the accessibility and reliability of Kibana.

Another challenge emerged from the quality of images sourced directly from haikyuu.fandom.com. Some images were not in high definition, potentially impacting user satisfaction. We proactively tackled this by sourcing higher-resolution images, ensuring a better visual experience for users.

Handling special characters, particularly Japanese characters in our data, presented another obstacle. To ensure a seamless presentation of information, we implemented a solution to convert these characters into English equivalents. This was crucial for preventing display issues and ensuring that users could access character information without impediments.

Shōyō Hinata (Japanese: 日向 翔陽 Hinata Shōyō) is the main protagonist of the Haikyū!! series by Haruichi Furudate. For the majority of the series, Hinata was a first-year student at Karasuno High. He was one of the middle blockers for the Boys' Volleyball Team.

"Shoyo Hinata is the main protagonist of the Haikyuu!! series by Haruichi Furudate."

Lastly, we identified a technical glitch that arose when encountering empty fields in the search column, leading to internal error messages. To mitigate this, we implemented a systematic approach by replacing all empty fields with a designated placeholder such as "-", preventing disruptions in the search results and offering a more user-friendly experience.

Rintaro Numajiri", "AKA": "-", "gender": "Male", "birthday": "hi Izaka", "AKA": "-", "gender": "Male", "birthday": " - ", "aiyuu", "AKA": "Tsucchi", "gender": "Male", "birthday": " - ", "shima", "AKA": " - ", "gender": "Male", "birthday": "August 29", "tabi", "AKA": "Pineapple-head", "gender": "Male", "birthday": "Hanayama", "AKA": " - ", "gender": "Male", "birthday": "April 10", "roishi", "AKA": "Shiro", "gender": "Male", "birthday": " - ", "uke Kita", "AKA": "Mister Perfect Kita", "gender": "Male", "

These challenges taught us the importance of anticipating and addressing potential issues proactively. We've gained insights into refining our processes, ensuring data consistency, and continually optimizing the user experience. Each challenge provided an opportunity for improvement, guiding us toward a more robust and reliable search system.

- Opportunities for future improvements

In the evolution of our search engine, several opportunities for future improvements present themselves. Since our current prototype utilizes a multi-match query with a fuzziness setting, future development could explore different types of search queries. By diversifying the search mechanisms, we aim to enhance the relevance and accuracy of search results, providing users with a more refined and tailored experience. Looking ahead, we aspire to enrich the user experience by incorporating additional information about Haikyuu. This could involve integrating character-related videos, offering users a dynamic and engaging perspective. Given ample time and resources, we also aspire to broaden the scope of our search engine by incorporating more characters from the Haikyuu. This expansion not only caters to the diversity of user interests but also enhances the comprehensiveness of our search system. In summary, the future roadmap for our search engine includes refining search queries for better precision, incorporating multimedia elements, expanding data coverage, and continuously growing the character database. These improvements collectively aim to elevate the user experience and make our search engine a comprehensive and indispensable tool for Haikyuu enthusiasts.

Conclusion

The Haikyuu Character Search System is a testament to the seamless blend of meticulous design and technical innovation, providing a vital connection for fans and Haikyuu enthusiasts. Leveraging Elasticsearch and the quicksort algorithm, the system offers an intuitive platform for users to easily access comprehensive information about Haikyuu characters. Through the compilation of data from haikyuu.fandom.com, organization into a JSON file, and integration with Flask, Elasticsearch, and Kibana, a user-friendly interface is generated. This not only solves the issue of forgetting character names but also serves as a valuable resource, significantly enhancing accessibility and enjoyment for Haikyuu fans globally.
